Dedication

TO OUR PARENTS:

As we grow older, we realize the important part that you, our parents, have played in preparing us to meet life for ourselves; and, after this realization, we feel that we shall always be indebted to you for the great role that you have played in our education. You have not only been tolerant of our short-comings, but you have also boosted our morale when we needed it most, sacrificing much that we might gain, and willingly helping us in all our problems. Your love and understanding have been ever-present.

To you, we should like to express our deepest and most sincere thanks for your faithful co-operation and warm understanding throughout our past school years. Your guidance, your leadership, and your determination have enabled us to get the most out of life; your faith and your interest in us are the sweetest memories of our youth.

THE SENIORS

Senior Class Song

*Every day that we have worked,
All these years that we have tried,
Every hour that we have shirked,
Has now made us leave your side;
Teachers, parents, friends, so dear—
Keep our love locked in your heart,
We shall want you always near,
For from you we hate to part.
Though it may break your heart and mine,
The minute when it's time to go,
Remember, friends, each word divine
That meant we hate to go.
'Til we all come back to you,
Just the way we are tonight,
To this school we will be true,
For it is our guiding light.*

Class History

In September, 1942, a group of young students entered Goldston School to begin their long journey on the road from Ignorance to Education. This was not the brightest class that ever entered Miss Grace Burke's and Mrs. Ollie Garner's first grades; but, despite this, they were eager to learn, though sometimes they grew lazy and had to be reminded of the task before them.

During the following years, under the direction of various teachers, they progressed rapidly and were soon ready to enter the long awaited doors of high school.

The gates were opened, and the frightened, hesitant members of the freshman class slowly entered and groped their way through the seeming darkness of those first few weeks of high school; however, dawn broke upon their timid souls as the darkness dwindled into light. They grew accustomed to their new surroundings, their teachers, and their fellow students, the upper classmen. To steer them through this doubtful year, they chose as leaders, Frances Dawson, John Palmer, Sylvia Fields, and Lois Smith.

The fall of '51 found them no longer doubtful and hesitant, but quite sure, almost too sure, of themselves. Not out of necessity, but because of custom, they chose as leaders, Lataine Oldham, Shelby Wicker, and Ronnie Gaines. Ten students—Ronnie Gaines, Eugene Oldham, Shelby Wicker, Lataine Oldham, John Palmer, Jo Ann Yarborough, Jeter Dowdy, Lois Smith, Elvette McIver, and Erma Gaines—served at the Junior-Senior Banquet.

Without waiting to be asked, they proudly proclaimed, "At last, we are Juniors!" Spirit ran high with a determination to give the best Junior-Senior Banquet in the history of Goldston School. They selected "STARDUST" as the theme, with Rev. Scott Poole as after dinner speaker. To supervise and encourage them that year, they selected Shelby Wicker, Augusta Hancock, Lois Smith, Erma Gaines, and Elvette McIver.

That same year, all Juniors who had participated in sports attended the first Athletic Banquet at Goldston with "Bones" McKinny as speaker of the evening.

Five Juniors acted as marshals with Shelby Wicker, Chief; Lataine Oldham, Erma Gaines, Augusta Hancock, and Mary Meeks. Many Juniors had roles in the Christmas play under the direction of Mrs. Vann Oldham.

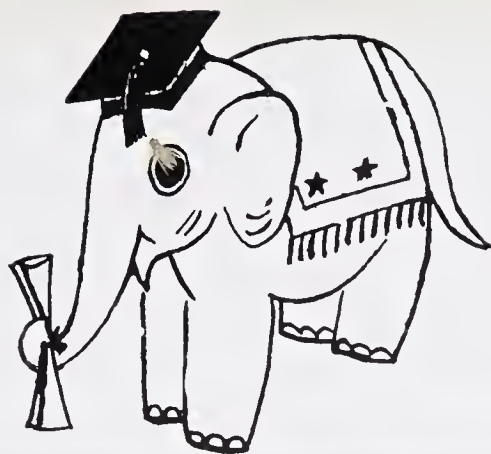

Made more confident by the success of this undertaking, they began their senior year as a group of happy-go-lucky youths. They chose as leaders for this, the most important year, Sylvia Fields, Mary Meeks, Shirley Burke, Erma Gaines, and Peggy Harris.

They presented the Senior play, "Comin' Round the Mountain," which everyone seemed to enjoy thoroughly.

After this they settled down again to books and lessons, but in their minds were thoughts of the Junior-Senior Banquet, the annuals which were due to arrive in March, their trip, and most of all, Commencement!

Now that the end of their high school career is in view, they, the members of the Class of '54, extend their sincerest appreciation and gratitude to their various teachers and to their principal. They are duly grateful for the guidance that they so willingly gave to prepare this class to face the future with a firm resolution to strive for success in all undertakings.

Senior Class Prophecy

One day I was wandering around in the attic of the home that my husband and I had rented and found a strange looking object. It resembled a small flower vase. My curiosity was aroused, so I picked it up. At my slightest touch, a small man appeared, as if in a cloud of smoke. He said, "I am a genie. Your wish is my command."

This put me to thinking of my classmates of '54. What could they be doing now? Ten long years had passed since we had last been together.

I told the genie my desire and he handed me a long, narrow object that reminded me of a black bottle. He said in his slow, coarse voice, "Look into this, my friend, and you shall have your wish."

Slowly taking the magic bottle from his smoky hand, I gazed into it. What I saw really surprised me. I could readily see my classmates whom I had not seen in a long time.

First, I saw Sylvia Fields, who was the number one Charleston dancer on the Arthur Godfrey Show.

Next, there came Shirley Burke, who was having a time looking after her husband and house full of kids.

Looking again, I saw Leonard Barber, completely settled down in his and Shirley's cozy little house.

Ronnie Gaines appeared next. He was the owner of the large chain of Gaines' Service Stations.

Mary Meeks, having speeded up in sewing, was the proud owner of the Meeks' Sewing School.

Wayne Jacobs was really having it easy—sitting back and letting his wife support him.

Augusta Hancock was reconciled to a troublesome married life with Ronald Gilliland.

Erma Gaines was still trying to hook Billy Scott.

Elvette McIver was playing his harmonica with the "Grand Old Oprey."

Shelby Wicker was teaching English in Goldston's new ultramodern school.

John Palmer was directing his own band over Goldston's new radio station W. N. A. G.

Ola Hart, a baby specialist, was in the Siler City Baptist Hospital.

Reynolds Mason, a tobacco farmer, was making plenty of money for his wife and six children.

Peggy Harris, an Air Force Nurse, was taking care of all the alcoholics and love sick two-timing males.

Jeter Dowdy was a math professor at Duke University.

Eugene Oldham was trying to publish a geometry book that required no work from the students.

It looked as though it were raining, but no, it was only perspiration dripping from Ronald Gilliland's face as he was working with his 25,000 chickens.

The last one I saw was Lataine Oldham, who was living in a beautiful country home on the outskirts of Sanford, with her husband, David, and two children.

The genie noticed that I had finished, so he reached for the "Magic" bottle. I was still a bit hazy from the ordeal that I had just witnessed, but I relinquished the bottle. He vanished as quickly as he had appeared.

Slowly I smiled a wee smile, for I knew that the dreams of longtime friends had come true.

CLASS POEM

*Tonight we come to Goldston High
To bid each one of you good-bye.
For now at last the time has come
When all our high school work is done.*

*Throughout these years we've worked each day
And we can now no longer stay.
In our success we do believe
We long to give, not just receive.*

*And now what e'er our life may be
We'll do our best as you will see.
Good-bye, and wish us luck once more
As we pass from your friendly door.*

Last Will and Testament

Know all men that the Goldston Senior Class of 1954, being of sound mind, with a few notable exceptions, does hereby dispose of its multitudinous and mellow, numerous and noteworthy possessions and talents as follows:

ARTICLE I: To the Teachers:

1. To principal Clayton, that towering Atlas who carries the school world upon his shoulders, we leave the ability of Hercules that he may turn the river of truth through the Augean Stables of ignorance.
2. To Mrs. Oldham, we leave all notes found in library books, for we feel that she is no longer too young to know about such things!
3. To Mrs. Holt, we bequeath the "patience of Griselda," so that she may see the next year's Seniors safely through.
4. To Mrs. Martin, we leave a pair of frogs, so that she may look forward to a school of tadpoles for her aquarium.
5. To Mr. Boyd, our coach, we say "congratulations." We actually saw him smile twice.
6. To Mr. Williford—a chicken leg, two turnips, one rutabaga, a peck (two gallons) of corn, a big bowl of Sauer Kraut, and "best wishes," for we know he will enjoy himself. We also grant him the right to pick up a sweet potato from the sack near the lunchroom door.
7. To Mrs. Phillips—a recording that calls out numbers, so that she can save her breath.

ARTICLE II: To the Students:

I, Leonard Barber, leave my school bus to my brother, Lawson, in hopes that he can drive it as well as I.

I, Shirley Burke, leave my neatness to Frances Gaines.

I, Jeter Dowdy, leave my place in the Beta Club to Jerry Gaines.

I, Sylvia Fields, leave my place as chief-cheerleader to Mollie Sims Cheek.

I, Erma Gaines, leave my pleasing personality to Elizabeth Rives. My ability to win friends, to Iola Gaines.

I, Ronnie Gaines, leave my title as Mr. Goldston High to Lowell Graham. My looks and friendliness, I will take with me.

I, Ronald Gilliland, leave my place as most athletic to Larry Graham.

I, Augusta Hancock, leave my privilege to receive the most athletic medal to Fairbell McMillan. Good luck, girls!

I, Peggy Harris, leave my ability to win friends and influence people to Vivian Gilliland. My figure, to Inez Poe.

I, Ola Hart, leave my ability to ask questions to Ronald Causey. Don't let me down!

I, Reynolds Mason, leave my height to William Griffin.

I, Elvette McIver, leave my ability to attract girls to Charles Daniels. Take care of it, boy!

I, Mary Meeks, leave my ability to get along with people to Jenny Dickerson. My red hair, I will keep for myself.

I, Eugene Oldham, leave my position as President of the Student Council to Dan Gaines.

I, Wayne Jacobs, leave my privilege to drive a school bus to Billy Hart.

I, Lataine Oldham, leave my good looks to Carolyn Caviness. My ability to teach, I will keep for later use.

I, John Palmer, leave my title as Captain of the football team to Bobby Jordan.

I, Shelby Wicker, leave my place as Co-Editor of the Goldstone to Jackie Miller.

Signed and sealed this twenty-fifth day of May in the year one-thousand nine-hundred and fifty-four.

JUNIOR CLASS SONG

To the Seniors of Goldston High School,

We come to wish you success; We have the memories you're leaving with us—of all your tears and happiness.

*You worked and played here with your dear classmates.
That's how the years went by, But now you're leaving the fun you've had here, and many friends of Goldston High.*

Please feel welcomed each time that you return and remember all the things that you have learned.

Our love is with you for now and always, Remember all your dear school days.
